To produce a matted effect, use a Layer Mask. You can manipulate the mask at any time to adjust the appearance of the layer and the layers below. Light and dark layers can be grouped together to change the appearance of the entire image. You can also change the color or contrast of individual layers. Colored Pencils are one of the most useful tools for graphic artists because they allow you to draw with pure lines and shapes in a broad selection of colors. Using the Burn, Dodge and Highlight tools, you can remove shadows and highlights in your image. These tools can also be used to adjust the overall brightness or contrast of your image. Bubbles are one of the most useful tools in Photoshop. They simulate air bubbles in water and can be used for a variety of effects. The Lens Blur filter lets you blur out the edges of a photograph to give it a soft appearance. Photoshop also has a feature that makes adding text to an image a snap. Simply click on the Type tool on the Tools palette and begin drawing on the layer. Click to add text and erase any part of the text. Some of the most common Photoshop Tools: Type: Create text that will appear at the specified location in the image, or apply a specific font. Brush: A brush is like a pencil in that it can be drawn on a selected layer. You can change the size, color, hardness, and opacity. Eraser: Often referred to as the Magic Eraser, this tool allows you to erase pixels in a layer. Layer Masks: These are a type of translucent mask that control the appearance of a layer and the layers below. You can either use a mask to mask over areas of an image that you do not want to affect, or mask an area that you want to see through to the layer below it. Burn, Dodge, and Highlight: These three tools allow you to remove shadows and highlights in an image. Curves: This tool lets you modify the overall brightness and contrast of an image. Halftone Screen: A halftone screen is similar to a dot screen. It can be used to make the images more realistic. Layer Comps: Photoshop layers are grouped into folders or sub-layers. Layers that are not grouped together can be made part of the same layer file, which can be helpful when you want to compare the effects of two layers. Clone Stamp: This tool allows you to copy

Attached Images Hi, I need to buy a new car and I'm looking at the BMW brand. I'm basing the decision for the next car on the 'new' Audi and the VW products. I've looked at the new Audi A4, Jetta, and GLC. Of those three, I prefer the Audi. From a value standpoint, it is comparable to the GLC, (much better than the Jetta). I'm wondering if a) the midsize BMW sedan will be a good value for me and b) if the 5-series are better than the 4-series (the E63 sedan and convertible notwithstanding). Right now, there are so many models and options that I'm a bit overwhelmed (with data overload!). Thanks for any help. 1) They all do. As for their differences, none really stand out from the others, except for I think the M5. The E39 was a fine car but the E60 is just a notch or two ahead of it, for me anyway. In between, the 4-series is as good as it gets, in my opinion. 2) M5 Vs. 335d comparison... I'll be damned, but I'd have to say I'd rather have the 335d over the M5 (as good as the M5 is, its just not as good as the 335d). Thanks. The Audi is more up my alley (though I like a lot of the 5-series, and I'd like to learn German so I can handle a 5er in German). The Jetta is cheaper, but I really like the way the BMW looks. I prefer the round headlights to the Audi's rectangular lights. From the short time I've spent with a GLC, it seems pretty decent. If I were to ever buy an auto, it would likely be a German product. In the case of the 5-series, the E93 sedan doesn't do it for me. It just doesn't feel good. Especially in the cockpit. With the E60
